BRITISH, COLONIAL, AND FOREIGN MERCANTILE GUIDE.

This Section, added at the solicitation of many of our Subscribers, has been much appreciated, as it forms a most useful GUIDE to BUYERS, and more so in consequence of many leading and influential firms having inserted particulars of their various specialties, under the several classifications or trade headings, rendering it more serviceable than a mere list of names.

This Section is compiled without any pretensions to completeness, it being necessary to make a nominal (but necessary) charge for inserting names, to enable us to continue to issue the work at a popular price, so that its extensive circulation should not be impaired.

SCOTTISH COMMERCIAL GAZETTEER

Giving the Location, Population, and other Local Statistics of the Counties, Cities, Towns, and Parishes—also of every Village and Hamlet of Importance—in Scotland, with Postal, Telegraphic, Railway, and Shipping Information.

NOTE.—1921 Census.—This Census was taken in the month of June instead of April. Consequently Holiday Resorts in many cases shew a large increase of population on account of the influx of summer visitors. In many places, therefore, the figures given do not represent the real normal population.

This Gazetteer is not intended to supply all the miscellaneous details usually found in the ordinary gazetteer, but simply to give such information as may be useful for commercial purposes, such as:—Post Towns, Money Order Offices, Telegraph Offices, and Railway Stations, including the location or distance from the respective towns and villages, shipping connections, etc., etc.

 CLYDE, the most important river of Scotland, rising in the south part of Lanarkshire, and forming an arm of the sea, called the Firth of Clyde, near the castle of Dumbarton. It becomes navigable at the city of Glasgow. The first boat in Europe successfully propelled by steam was launched in this river in 1812; and since then the river's shipping and shipbuilding have both grown enormously. Near Lanark the river descends from 560 to 200 feet, forming the celebrated falls of Clyde, above which flows a beautiful trout stream, passing through a fertile valley amid lovely scenery. The waters become more sluggish and polluted as it nears Glasgow, and large sums of money have been spent in improving and deepening the channel from Glasgow to Dumbarton, with great success. Along the ancient seamargin of the river is an almost continuous line of watering places, much frequented during the summer months. On its banks are some of the largest shipbuilding and marine engineering works in the world

GLASGOW, the commercial and manufacturing capital of Scotland, and in aggregate importance, the second city in the empire. Situated on the Clyde, 46½ m. Caledonian Railway and 47½ m. North British Railway from Edinburgh, and 401 miles from London. It is the political capital of Lanarkshire, a royal and Parliamentary burgh, a county, a university city, seat of judiciary and sheriff courts, and a head port. Originating from the cathedral founded about A.D. 560; was made a royal burgh in 1180; and was but a small burgh of limited extent in 1550. Its great and continued prosperity—entirely the result of enterprise and skill in manufactures and commerce—only dates from the 18th century. Its present vast predominance testifies to the vitality and energy of its citizens. In the fifty years between 1831 and 1881 it considerably more than trebled its population, and now, including suburbs, is of such magnitude that space will not admit here of even a meagre description. The city area now covers 19,183 acres. Govan and Partick are now incorporated. The public buildings are both numerous and handsome, and include many very interesting and noble structures. The Cathedral, the University, the Merchants' House, the General Post Office, and the Royal Exchange, may be mentioned. The Municipal Buildings, opened by Queen Victoria, 22nd August 1888, cost about £700,000, including £170,000 paid for the site. The charitable institutions are many, the most important being the Royal, Western, and Victoria Infirmaries, Fever Hospitals, Maternity Hospital, Asylum for the Blind, Deaf and Dumb Institute, &c. It has various scientific and literary institutions, including a museum and many public libraries, also a botanic garden, several public parks and many monuments—no fewer than 13 standing in George Square. The Churches are of all denominations. The harbour shared in the prosperity of the city, and by extensions from time to time, necessitated by increasing trade, acquired its present greatness at a cost of £10,000,000. In 1801 the quayage of the harbour was only 382 yards in length, the water area 4 acres; the revenue from the harbour and river £3400. In 1906 the length of the quayage was 17,907 yards, the area of the harbour and docks 479½ acres, of which 166½ is land and 313 water, and the revenue £528,569. For about 2½ miles from Glasgow Bridge the river presents the appearance of an immense dock, and is deep enough for the largest seagoing ships. The harbour possesses all the appliances of a first-class port, and is connected with the whole railway system of the kingdom. Headquarters of the great shipbuilding and marine engineering trade of the Clyde, and centre of the great iron and steel industry. An extensive electric tramway system, owned by the Corporation, connects all the adjacent suburbs and towns. Its imports and exports are only exceeded by Liverpool. Pop. 1,034,174

HEBRIDES, THE, as now understood, includes all the Western Islands from the Mull of Kintyre to Cape Wrath, consisting of a series of groups of islands and rocky islets extending 205 miles—from the Butt of Lewis to the Mull of Oua in Islay—along the weird, wild, and romantic coast of the West Highlands. The distance of the various islands from the mainland varies from less than  $\frac{1}{2}$  a mile at Kyle Rhea, south-east of Skye, to over 100 miles to lone St Kilda, and from  $1\frac{1}{2}$  at Gigha to 21 at the south of Islay. The entire number of these islands and islets exceeds 500, but only about 180 are of any value. Of these Lewis and Harris, Skye, Mull, Islay, Jura, and North and South Uists are the principal islands. These are very much diversified as regards scenery—that of Skye and other islands of the Inner Hebrides being the grandest scenery perhaps in Scotland; the scenery of Lewis and other islands of the Outer Hebrides is less picturesque, but a peculiar feature of these is the immense number of fresh water lochs scattered everywhere, and yielding some of the best salmon and trout fishing in Scotland. Most of the islands are extensively intersected by inlets and arms of the sea, affording safe and sheltered anchorage. The Lords of the Isles and the Insular Chiefs of the various turbulent clans have left numerous monuments of their ambition and their rule, in the form of towers and castles; and the remains of the religious establishments testify to the Christian zeal and piety of former generations.

INVERNESS-SHIRE it the largest county in Scotland, stretching from sea to sea; it is bounded on the north by Ross-shire and part of the Moray Firth, east by the counties of Nairn, Moray, and Aberdeen, and south by those of Perth and Argyll, and west by the Atlantic Ocean. A small district between the counties of Banff and Moray is annexed, and several of the Hebrides—Skye, Harris, North and South Uist, Benbecula, Barra, Raasay, Eigg, St Kilda, and others. The mainland portion is divided into two almost equal parts by the Great Glen and the Caledonian Canal; the northern extremity of this glen opens by the river Ness into the Moray Firth, and flowing in a south-westerly direction encloses Lochs Ness, Oich, Lochy, and Eil, whence it extends into the Atlantic Ocean by Loch Linnhe. In the northern part is Strath Glass, with its tributaries, running into the Firth at Beaulieu. The county is noted for its unsurpassed romantic scenery, its glens, and mountains. It contains Ben Nevis, the highest mountain in Britain, which attains a height of 4406 feet, and several other ranges which present some of the finest mountain scenery in the world. It is well watered, the principal rivers being the Ness, the Lochy, the Beaulieu, and the Spey. The Caledonian Canal connects the east and west seas from Loch Eil on the west to the Moray Firth on the east coast. The west coast is indented by numerous salt-water lochs. There are extensive grouse moors and deer forests, game being very plentiful; the rivers abound with salmon, and in the lochs the char is found in great perfection. - SUTHERLANDSHIRE, a county extending across the whole breadth of Scotland, from the North Sea to the Atlantic Ocean. It is bounded on the west by the Minch, north by the Atlantic Ocean, east by the county of Caithness, south-east by the Dornoch Firth, and south by the Oicel and several smaller streams, which separates it from the county of Ross and Cromarty. The surface of the county is rugged and mountainous, except on the south-east shore. The eastern district, near the North Sea, consists of a strip of level land which runs along the coast side; the middle of central district, resembles the other parts of the Highlands of Scotland, it contains the valleys of the rivers of Helmsdale, Brora, Fleet and Oicel, with their tributary streams issuing from the neighbouring mountains. The shores bordering the Atlantic are wild, rocky, and mountainous. The Assynt Mountains are huge and barren, but the glens between afford excellent pasture for sheep. On the coasts of the numerous bays many tracts of land have been brought under cultivation, but the climate, from the constant rain and mists, is unfavourable to the growth of crops. The principal rivers are the Oicel, which enters the Firth of Dornoch, and is navigable for about 12 miles from its mouth, the Water of Fleet, the Water of Brora, the Water of Helmsdale, the Water of Hallidale, the Water of Strathy, the Navar, the Waters of Kenloch, Hope, Dionard, and Eribol. There are also lakes, the chief being Loch Assynt, Loch Elphin, Loch Leighal, Loch More, and Loch Shin, the last of which stretches 20 miles north-west to south-east, is about one mile broad, and abounds with salmon and trout. There are extensive deer forests, and abundance of all kinds of game. The Duke of Sutherland is the largest landowner. The minerals include rock crystals, pebbles and garnets. The principal rivers are the Cree, the Bladenock, the Tarff, the Luce, and others. The climate is mild and humid. The chief crops are oats and barley, also wheat, potatoes, and turnips. # COUNTY SUPPLEMENT

IMPORTANT NOTE.

THIS SUPPLEMENT contains exhaustive Lists of COUNTY RESIDENTS, including COUNTY COUNCILLORS, PROFESSIONAL GENTLEMEN and FARMERS. The Lists have been compiled from the latest Official Information, and are arranged alphabetically according to Counties and Parishes, but (with a few exceptions) do not include residents in Municipal or Parliamentary Burghs. It will be seen that in many cases the name of the Parish is not required to complete the Postal Address, while in others the name of the County should be given.

The Publishers find that it is not possible to revise the FARMERS and PRIVATE RESIDENTS every year. A certain number of Counties are revised annually so that the whole of Scotland is covered within a period of about three years. The Counties revised since last edition was issued are:—BERWICK, BUTE, CAITHNESS, DUMFRIES, HADDINGTON, INVERNESS, KIRKCUDBRIGHT, SHETLAND (not ORKNEY), ROSS AND CROMARTY, ROXBURGH, SELKIRK, SUTHERLAND, and WIGTOWN.

Abbreviations used:—P.T.—Post Town. R.S.O.—Railway Sub-Office. S.O.—Sub-Office.
